Bristol Miss is Bride of Holmesburg Resident

A wedding took place Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in St. Ann's Catholic Church, when Miss Jennie Vattimo, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Vattimo, 617 Cedar street, became the bride of Michael Centanni, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Centanni, 8045 Erdrick street, Holmesburg. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Marcelino Romagnolo. Miss Florence Tamburella played the wedding march; and Mrs. Anthony Russo sang "I Love You Truly" and "Oh Promise Me" during the ceremony.

Miss Regina Centanni, Holmesburg, a sister of the groom, was maid of honor; and Miss Adeline Arcolesse, Wood street, was bridesmaid. The best man was Albert Fusco, Holmesburg.

The bride was gowned in white transparent velvet, fashioned on princess lines, featuring a high neck-line and leg-of-mutton sleeves made of angel lace. Her veil of tulle was edged with lace and made cap effect, trimmed with pearls. The bridal bouquet consisted of white roses.

The gowns worn by the maid of honor and the bridesmaid were similar in style. They were made of transparent velvet and fashioned on close-fitting lines, with short sleeves. The necklines were low in the back and formed a cowl in the front. Miss Centanni wore salmon tone with a pale blue velvet girdle, blue velvet turban, blue moire slippers, a shower bouquet of pink roses and larkspur. Miss Arcolesse wore pale blue with pink accessories, and carried a shower bouquet similar to that of the maid of honor.

A reception was held at the home of the bride, 100 attending. The happy couple left Saturday evening for Washington, D. C., where they will spend a week. Mrs. Centanni travelled in a dark brown cloth suit trimmed with brown fur. Her accessories were of brown. Mr. and Mrs. Centanni will reside at the home of the groom.

BULL CARIBOU AND RETINUE OF SIX STALKED IN CANADIAN ROCKIES BY HULMEVILLE HUNTER, AND GUIDE; CAMERA OPERATED DURING THE KILL

Large Goat Slides a Distance After Being Shot on Side of Mountain — Rock Stops Its Descent With The Sliding Shale

In his hunt for big game in the Canadian Rockies, in British Columbia, Cyrus E. Smith, Hulmeville, recently had some exciting experiences. The third installment of Mr. Smith's story is here given:
(By Cyrus E. Smith)

The second day's hunt gave a little variety, some rain, ice and snow, and we took our chances on going out. In 10 or 15 minutes, about a mile from camp, the guide sighted on the grassy slopes down from the mountain some three or four caribou taking their morning feed, and then an additional lot, making seven or eight. As we came closer they became uneasy and restless, and kept moving, although they seemed not to have seen, scented or heard us. But it kept on snowing and the wind kept shifting and was likely to carry our scent to them when they would soon be off and away.

They were on a flat slope between the mountain and the stream, and so we stalked them up this stream bed, where by crawling we could keep out of their sight for probably a mile or more and they were still uneasy and moving farther away from us when the guide decided to leave the branch, cross the slope behind a knoll, and stalk them up over a mountain ridge. After quite some climbing and stalking we were higher on the mountain, above them, and soon got opposite. By keeping covered by rocks and firs we soon got down to within range of them, peacefully feeding, a young bull caribou and his six lady friends (a Mormon perhaps). So unaware of our presence were they that we cached ourselves behind a spreading fir and some rocks, and trained our movie camera on the herd, wondering if it would register a picture as it was cloudy and snowing.

After taking what movies we cared to without being discovered we turned to making a decision of the disposition of the future of the bull caribou as he had only a head and spread for a fair mount—should we leave him for a better one or not. But I desired to knock him over as the mount was fair, and we needed the meat for the camp eats. So the guide operated the camera at the time of the kill, and while their Lord and Master was going down for the last count his bevy of six lady friends gave one last look, threw their heads high and galloped away up the valley and over the mountain to parts unknown. And some caribou bull! He was fat, and sleek as a seal, only lacking in age and spread of antlers, yet bringing peace and comfort to the appetite in the hunters' camp.

After one day's lay-off from rain, snow and hail the fourth day or the third day's hunt lay up the valley bordered by mountains. It was still trying to hail and snow, and there was a cold, bleak wind from the north, and it was icy underfoot. We had started out for caribou, but after a half to three-quarters of an hour's hike from camp the guide spotted what looked to be a goat way up on a rocky ledge. After training his field glasses on it for some time he felt quite sure it was a mountain "Billy" and we decided to make a try for him, although I was not eager on account of the distance up, and the steep, loose, sliding shale we had to ascend.

From the time we left the valley floor until we landed "Billy" took close to two hours. The first part was steep but solid, then we came to the sliding shale at two-thirds of the way up. The guide asked me to hold onto a rock and await his return while he peered over some peaks. I had been going along up with him pretty well, always looking up, but after the guide left, and as I lay there holding on to not much but loose stones and shale, I looked downward, and not far away could see the top of a cliff that had some hundreds of feet sheer drop. We had skirted around and above this cliff on our way up, and having been always looking up before I had not noticed it before until now. My confidence wasn't any too great after that. And when the guide returned I was about ready to quit, but he urged me on, saying we could make it. But he had on shoes with spiked soles that held far better than my elkhide boots with crepe soles.

So we joined hands and crawled on together until finally we saw "Billy" just above us. He had left his bed on the rock ledge and was crossing the sliding shale above us. We had to lie flat and were in quite a fix as for shooting on the loose shale one was liable to slide enough to spoil one's aim just at the wrong moment. To the side and above was a flat place probably a foot square that I crawled over to and sat more secure. "Billy" had stopped on his way around above us, and was trying to locate some un-

ST. ANN'S DROPS THIRD CONSECUTIVE BATTLE

Lose to Rising Sun Bulldogs in Fray During Rain

FINAL SCORE IS 12 TO 0

(By T. M. Jono)

St. Ann's A. A. dropped their third consecutive game of the season on Sullivan's field yesterday, losing to the Rising Sun Bulldogs, 12-0. In a fray played throughout the rain.

The cause of the "Saints'" defeat was again the failure of its backfield to function in its proper manner. On several occasions during the first half, the Bristol team had the ball in scoring positions but could not push it over.

At the beginning of the second session the "Saints" took the ball to the three yard line and had four downs to carry the pigskin over but could not do it because of the heavy Rising Sun line. A pass was tried in the fourth down but Conti let the rain-soaked pigskin slip through his mitts.

On three more occasions during that first half in which the St. Ann's team completely outplayed the invaders the oval was taken within the ten yard strip but the scoring power was lacking and Rising Sun always kicked out of danger.

The visitors scored their first six-pointer in the last play of the first half. A forty yard pass, Gaffney to DiRogieris did the trick. The try for the extra point was blocked.

In the last period the Bulldogs worked the ball from the thirty yard line to the goal line by continually driving at the St. Ann's line. Nicotini took the ball over on a line plunge.

Next Sunday the St. Ann's team will again play on Sullivan's field.

TO FREE PRISONER

Doylestown, Oct. 17.—Joseph Madello, Philadelphia, jobless father of six small children who committed to the prison here for 30 days for shooting a pheasant near Langhorne, Saturday, will be freed today.

Madello was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Keating, at Langhorne, and fined $45 for killing the game bird out of season. In default of payment of the fine, he was ordered sent to jail for 30 days in the Bucks County prison here. However, when Justice of the Peace Keating learned the facts of the case and that the man had shot the pheasant to get food for his hungry family he said: "I would not have sentenced this man at all had I known all the circumstances. I am ready to free him whenever a member of his family or a friend comes before me for a copy of the charge."

Mrs. Madello planned to get a copy of the charge and secure her husband's release today.

Fine Film at Grand is Based on Famed Trial

"Unashamed," the attraction at the Grand Theatre tonight and tomorrow afternoon and night, is a story that most everyone in this vicinity is familiar with, being based on the sensational murder trial held in the Montgomery County Courts at Norristown some months ago, and which was followed very closely in the sensational trial of a brother, who was tried for the killing of his sister's sweetheart. The trial details were carried in the Courier and all Philadelphia papers.

In "Unashamed" Helen Twelvetyes takes the character of the sister who was wronged; Robert Young as the brother, and Robert Warwick as the father; Lewis Stone takes the prominent part of the attorney. "Unashamed", shown at Norristown last week, broke all house records for attendance. It was almost impossible to accommodate the crowds that clamored for admission, and Bristol should likewise set a record as everyone is much interested in this case.

Manager Edward Lynn will have a special matinee for the women Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 to accommodate those who are unable to get to the night performances.

There will be an extra added attraction also in "The Chimp," a funny comedy with the two funniest men on the screen, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy. This pair are a show in themselves and always carry a large number of fun fanatics.

CLUB TO MEET

The W. I. C. Club of Second Baptist Church has arranged for a meeting at the home of Mrs. Susie Allen, 551 Otter street, tonight.

BRISTOL MAN FILES SUIT FOR ACCIDENT DAMAGES

Chauncey E. Stoneback, Sr.,
Brings Action Against
New York Man

START DIVORCE SUIT

Viola R. Jones Enters Suit For Divorce From Jesse E.
Jones

Three damage suits and a statement of claim were filed in the Court of Common Pleas at Doylestown within the last few days.

Benjamin H. Horman, 160 West 73rd street, New York City, was named the defendant in a $575 damage suit filed by Chauncey E. Stoneback, Sr., of Bristol.

According to the claim, the plaintiff was driving his car on the Absecon boulevard in Atlantic City when a car operated by the defendant collided with his car, wrecking it to the extent of several hundred dollars. Medical aid and loss of time, it was stated, caused the defendant considerable annoyance. Horman, who was operating the car, is charged with negligence and carelessness.

A statement of claim in a suit in which the plaintiff hopes to recover the sum of $432.08 was filed by Anna Simon, of Trenton, N. J., it was revealed today after it was learned that the suit is the outcome of a court trial in New Jersey when the defendant, John R. Stackhouse, of Lower Makefield refused to pay the amount.

The plaintiff, it was stated, in a session of district court of the City of Trenton, N. J., was given judgment for the sum of $432.08 with interest.

The action originally was the result of an automobile collision in which the plaintiff and the defendant were involved on August 4, 1931, on the Allentown-Yardville highway, in Mercer county.

The plaintiff at this time alleged her damages amounted to nearly $500, which she hoped to recover from the Lower Makefield defendant. Judge French, of Trenton, handed down the judgment in the September term of court.

John W. Payne has filed suit seeking $1,000 damages against Robert K. Tomlinson, of George School, as the result of injuries suffered when their automobiles collided head-on near Grafton, on the Yorktown State Highway in Virginia, October 19, 1931.

Tomlinson, the suit avers, was speeding at the time of the crash. The plaintiff, according to the libel, suffered injuries to his neck and shoulders following the accident.

Suit for divorce has been filed in the Common Pleas Court here by the wife of Jesse Egan Jones, 343 Barry Place, Bristol. The libellant, Viola R. Jones, now living in Crofton, charged cruel and barbarous treatment. They were married Nov. 25, 1911, in Burlington, N. J.

WAGES OF CRIME

Does crime pay? Available figures say it does not. Criminals must think it does or there wouldn't be so many of them and so few who reform. The probability is that crime pays large dividends as long as the criminal is out of jail, but doesn't pay even a "preacher's salary" when the lawbreaker runs afoul of the law. It is known with certainty that crime does not pay for the time the criminal spends behind the bars.

The point with which the public pointed horns. Tears were in the eyes of the man who, however, however, conclusive of the economic failure of convicts, will have much effect on the activities of the criminal. If there is one thing that is impossible, it is to argue an underworld character, or even a potential criminal, into obedience to law. The crook is by nature a gambler, and he is willing to take chances of making good his escape after a robbery. He recognizes that he will be a loser if caught and convicted, but it is the large chance he has of escaping with no punishment that helps make crime prevalent.

Law enforcement officers point to the fact that certainty of punishment of the big profiteers in the criminal game is what is most needed in the United States.

WAITING TO BE SHOWN

Some scientific words emanating from the lips of a scientific man convey the thought that man's old religions are passing, but are still reacting upon his environment, dangerously and inevitably; that sentimental and emotional factors make for race degeneration, which means that if the race is to improve, young men and women must be taught to pick their life partners according to eugenic laws.

Some old-fashioned persons believe, however, that one of the things that is wrong with the world is the fact that the old religions are passing. Possibly the old religions did not fit. But who will believe that the old religions have caused the ills of the world?

The modern note, with pessimism as its key, has been sounded. Nevertheless, old-fashioned people will have to be shown.

his father thinks he is too young for it, and wants him to develop an individual style before he starts it.

Terence exhibits two water colors,

"Young Joy," a child and a pony beside the canal, and "Landscape," a scene beside the water with a boat in the central foreground. All have agreed that he shows remarkable promise.

Henry B. Snell shows two pictures painted in Maine, one of them, "Desolate Coast," is a terrific thing of pounding surf on mighty crags. He has captured even the fog that rises from the spray. The other is "Gowana Creek," a dock scene with the sterns of two ships showing in the upper right. W. L. Lathrop exhibits "Gay Weather," a canvas with his usual serenity, as also is his "Clouds from the Sea." This latter is a skyscape in which the observer can actually see the clouds rolling. He also shows "Chilmark Moor."

Inez McComb, portrait of her husband is creating considerable favorable comment. The model is in a prone position, showing the upper body. The texture of the pillow blending with the flesh tints of the face provides an interesting color study. She also shows an attractive still life, "Calla Lily."

In addition to his canvasses, "Quarry, Brownsburg," and "Old Church, Carversville," Daniel Garber also shows two delicately executed etchings. These have been sold.

William Francis Taylor shows "Summer" and "First Green," landscape studies. John Polinsbee's "Rabbit Run Bridge" is one of the finest interpretations ever made of this much-painted scene. He uses a refreshing type that is a departure from the purely academic. He also exhibits "Storm Sky," "Clouds" and several sketches.

Lloyd R. Ney shows one canvas and three water colors in the starkly modernistic execution which characterizes his work. These, it is said, are too "dark" to satisfy most people, but his canal scene in water color is creating much favorable comment. Bob Hogue shows "Another Woman," an attractive portrait study.

Norman Mortimer, sculptor, shows a head, "Portrait Study of W. L. Lathrop," which is considered a fine execution.

"Then you'll have to go to work."

"Is she so terrible?"

"Heavens no. Just dumb, and likely to be a nuisance. I don't want her running in here, being chummy, I'll tell you that."

"Cramp your style, dearest."

She said slowly, "McKevitt used to admire her. I suppose he still does. Not that I care," she added, when she saw the sardonic grin on Avery's dark features.

He smoked in silence. After a long pause he said, "I've got until tomorrow to pay my rent."

"You'll have to hurry and sell something, won't you?"

"I don't know that there is anything I care to sell," he returned loftily.

"Then you'll have to get to work!"

"I refuse to prostitute my art."

"I don't know how you ate before you met me!" she cried angrily.

"I don't want to be a nuisance, but I'm getting sick of having you ask me for money, Avery Woodward! I should think you'd be ashamed—I would, really!"

"I'm sorry that you put it that way. I had considered my tuition and my time of some value. Much as I would enjoy giving all my time to you I cannot, since I have no patron saint, and I cannot eat like the birds. I shall pay you back for what you have advanced me, since you do not consider it

"Oh, come back and shut the door!" she cried, dashing away the angry tears. "I wish you'd quit acting. You know I won't let you go. I wouldn't let you paint that woman's portrait for all the money in the world. And Avery, you can't leave me now—after I've left art school for you. You couldn't really and truly leave me, could you Avery? Avery, you unprincipled scamp—tell me you couldn't!"

"Never, never," he murmured his lips on her cheek. "There isn't another woman like you, in all the world!"

"No, I'm the biggest fool of them all," she answered, loving him back. "I can't get along without you, and I almost hate you. I wish I'd never set eyes on you, sometimes. I'd be married to Ralph McKevitt, and living on easy street this minute if—"

"Humph, he's not such pickings. Cocklebur, you know, the little fat guy that looks like a garden slug, and bought my 'Twilight on the Estuary,' was gossiping about him the other day. Says his firm is liable to blow up any minute."

"No!"

"Oh, yes. Cocklebur's no fool. He knows his groceries. He ought to, worth a cool million and a half himself."

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM WINS OVER MT. HOLLY

By Oscar Corn
(H. S. Press Representative)

The local Cardinal and Gray eleven smashed through to victory to hand a scarred but hard-fighting Mount Holly Red and White eleven a 6-0 setback, both teams met in their annual clash on R. and F. stadium, Saturday, at Mount Holly.

Bristol high had the upper hand during the entire game, and due to the splendid work of the line and defensive backs, Mount Holly gained very few first downs.

Every minute of the game was packed with action. Bristol had the opportunity of scoring three times, but two of these times, "Lady Luck" was against them, and they lost the ball on downs.

Many passes were tried during the game, and both teams made good gains by the aerial route. Bristol and Mount Holly intercepted two passes each.

Bristol made a drive of 40 yards, in the first quarter, and then gave Mount Holly the ball on a fumble. Now Mount Holly started a push which was good for 30 yards; they then lost the ball on downs. In this way, with a spectacular run, pass or tackle, the game continued for three quarters.

With five minutes left to play in the last stanza, Borneice, by a nerve-tugging gallop of 30 yards around left-end, brought the ball to the 9 yard line. Here Mt. Holly held stubbornly and the Cardinal and Gray eleven lost the ball with one-half yard to go. Mount Holly kicked to the 40-yard line, and Bristol again started forward with only two minutes to go. Cole was good for six yards off-tackle, and Spencer plunged through center for three more. Again, due to splendid interference Borneice went around left end for 30 yards. Mount Holly did not intend to be beaten, and held for two downs. Quarterback Roe called a huddle, and on the next play, Cole slid through a hole on the left side of the Mount Holly line for the only and deciding tally of the game. The try for extra point failed.

Line-up:

Bristol	Mt. Holly
Zeffert	Pew
Karp	Wagner
Fell	Decker
Rue	Rossell
Orazi (Capt.)	Howe
Niendorf	Stafford
Brown	Woodside
Roe	Gerber

Substitutions: Bristol—Smith for Brown; Gallagher for Niendorf; Schiffer for Fell; Tosti for Roe; Ross for Tosti; Fletcher for Smith. Mount Holly—Miller for Pew; Sanford for Whitcraft.

First Game of Season Won by The Penn A. C.

The strong Penn A. C. won its first game of the season on Sullivan's field Sunday morning, triumphing over the White Elephants, 14-0.

The Pennac outplayed the White Elephants throughout the fray and featured with the line-plunging of Gallone, their star fullback.

"Russie" Unruh and "Reds" Cummons starred for the losers. In the winners' line Capriotti and Pone were outstanding.

The Penn A. C. would like to hear from teams wishing football games.

Women Learn Much At Cooking School Session

A few hundred women attended the two sessions of the cooking school in Mutual Aid Society Hall, Wood street, Saturday afternoon and evening, learning the value and ease of operating electric ranges.

Miss Dorothy J. Mackenzie, president of Philadelphia Dietitians' Association, was present, and explained to the home-makers the manner in which nourishing and palatable dishes can be obtained from inexpensive foods. Mrs. May Hershey Vincent, of Drexel Institute, showed how women can have more leisure by systematic cooking and work.

OUR DAILY FOOD

MRS. AMERICA—THE EPICURE

ACCORDING to George Reitor, the American housewife is becoming more and more the artist in her kitchen. Mr. Reitor feels that the present trend is one that will make Mrs. America an epicure. "Just think," said Mr. Reitor to me the other day, "just think of what is possible in today's kitchen. Housewives can buy the best in food at little money, and with intelligent application, American husbands can have quality food served them which once was reserved for only the very wealthy."

I asked Mr. Reitor to cite an example to me. "Colonel," he said, "I could cite one hundred examples. But let's take one that might seem remote and far-fetched. It will be all the more convincing."

I asked Mr. Reitor for a recipe using sardines and which might be a real epicurean treat, but which came under the heading of "Everyday Foods," and he more than filled my request with the following recipe.

Grilled Sardines à la Seville

Select a large sardine for this purpose. Drain off the oil and heat both sides of the sardine in a frying pan. Handle them carefully when turning them in the pan. Cut the bread the same size as the sardine and toast to a light brown. Dip toasted pieces in olive oil and spread each piece with anchovy paste that has been mixed with a little finely minced parsley. Place one sardine on each piece of toast and return to the oven to heat. Serve with lemon butter.

Bull Caribou Stalked In Canadian Rockies

known danger. He was looking right at us or we thought he was; and it seemed he could not make us out. My last shooting when I bagged the caribou wasn't very good, and I was a little ashamed of it. But on this "Billy" I was well enough satisfied, especially as I wasn't any too securely planted to shoot. Three shots and they all registered at each of the first two shots. He humped his back and trembled, but was still on his feet. But as he started to go on up the mountain he dropped flat at the third shot and started to slide down, but landed by a rock that held him. As we crawled on up to the kill we found he was very big, old and fat, and as round as a barrel. He was none too securely held, only caught by the side of the rock, ready to start sliding down the mountain anytime. So we anchored him fast, and wedged stones below him. If he had ever started down he would have had a good ways to go, and the guide informed me that there was generally little left of them to mount, horns, hide, or head, if that happened on that kind of rock slide.

I can't help but give the guide all the credit for the chance at this kill, as he persisted and went on steep, slippery slides that I was none too eager to traverse. And this inhabitant of the rocky cliffs could sure take some punishment and carry some lead for of the three heavy lead pellets he received any one of which should have been fatal as the guide remarked when skinning him, yet in the goat's efforts to get away he never went down until the last, and it brought back to my recollections what I had been told by an experienced hunter and guide that a Rocky Mountain goat will carry away more lead and takes more punishment to stop him than it requires to land a grizzly bear (and that is going some).

I was also told by the same hunter about a friend of his who was out after bear with his six well trained Airedale bear dogs, and that during a hunt for bear he ran across a Rocky Mountain goat in the clear. Within five or ten minutes after the hunter called to his dogs to close in and hold the "Billy" until he got up to the quarry, the "Billy" had disposed of, tossed and gored beyond repair four of the dogs with quick moves of his needle-pointed horns. Tears were in the hunter's eyes as he told his friend of the loss and quick disposal of his prize dogs.

And so a hunter can't be laggy or loafy.

If he really need one for a trophy. For to get him they must strive and climb.

And also spend a lot of time." (Continued tomorrow)

His fur is white, his horns curved in shape. Beneath his chin a beard is draped. His size and noble conformation Compels the hunter's admiration.

No beast alive can get around in so difficult and rocky ground. With greater ease and speed, and skill. Which makes this jumper hard to kill.
